

I was very upset to learn that the FCC is considering overriding the Indiana Attorney General's limitations on telemarketing. Since the program was introduced, my family and I can once more eat dinner without being interrupted, and I can work at home without having to turn my phone off. The current regulations in the state of Indiana exemplify government working for the people. We need stricter protections; not the overturning of those protections we have. Residents are entitled to privacy and peace in their own homes. I hope you will agree. Thank you.